MEET THE MINIFIGURES

HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

These amazing minifigures are ordered according to the Star Wars™ property in which they first appeared or mostly featured. Tabs at the top of each page indicate which properties this minifigure appears in. As most Star Wars characters appear in the wider universe of Legends, that tab is highlighted only if a minifigure appears in an Legends set. The Clone Wars tab has not been highlighted if the character has a separate Clone Wars minifigure.

This book also includes variants of featured minifigures, which are the same character, but have some modifications that make them different in some way.

Darth Maul is the terrifying Sith apprentice of Darth Sidious. He lurks in the shadows, waiting for his chance to attack the Jedi! Maul's minifigure appears in nine LEGO Star Wars sets. His horned Zabrak head-mold was created in 2011, and in his 2012 variant he is without his usual robes—so you can see the Nightbrother tattoos on his arms.

Darth Maul is a Nightbrother from Dathomir. His eyes have turned yellow from studying the dark side

In the first set to include Darth Maul—Lightsaber Duel (set 7101)—Maul's lightsaber hilt came with only one blade

Merry Sithmas

The 2012 LEGO Star Wars Advent Calendar came with a Santa Maul. He wears a red cape with a fur-lined hood, and has a festive candy cane printed on the back of his torso.

STAR VARIANTS

The eyes have it

Early Maul minifigures have regular LEGO® heads printed with Nightbrother tattoos and yellow eyes. This 1999 variant from Sith Infiltrator (set 7663) has black pupils in the eyes and different face patterns.

All in black

This 2011 minifigure appears in Darth Maul's Sith Infiltrator (set 7961). At the time, only two minifigures had double-bladed lightsabers: Maul and Savage Opress.

This minifigure was used for promotional giveaways, including at the 2012 New York Toy Fair and LEGOLAND® Windsor in April 2012

Bounty Hunter Pursuit (set 7133)

Zam flies her nimble aircspeeder in just this one 2002 set. The speeder's cockpit has a small control panel for Zam's navigation.

Heavy helmet

Zam's crash helmet is seen only on her minifigure in LEGO Star Wars. However, it is also used as a heavy-duty helmet by miners in the LEGO themes Power Miners and Rock Raiders, and by a driver in the World Racers theme. Only Zam wears it in light gray.

Zam's torso, hips, and legs, printed with her specialized armor and equipment, are unique to her minifigure.

Changeling

Swiveling Zam's head around exposes her true Clawdite form. Zam was one of the first double-faced minifigures.

This shady character has proven elusive in LEGO Star Wars and her minifigure is exclusive to one 2002 set. Zam Wesell is a bounty hunter with a special edge: she is a Clawdite shapeshifter who can alter her physical appearance as she chooses. Her minifigure head can change between her pretty human disguise and her natural Clawdite face!

 BOUNTY HUNTER

Bounty hunter Jango Fett keeps a low profile in the LEGO Star Wars galaxy. He stars in just three sets, undergoing a redesign in 2013 for his appearance in Corporate Alliance Tank Droid (set 75015). Jango is made up of many unique LEGO pieces that might make his minifigure as legendary as the man himself.

Father like son

Though it is based on Jango's appearance in Episode II, this face print was first used for his son, Boba Fett (p.26).

Silver helmet with antenna has a printed black T-visor (the 2002 variant's has an opening)

STAR VARIANTS

Original Jango

The 2002 Jango defends Slave I (set 7153) with a pair of WESTAR-34 blaster pistols. His J-12 jetpack and helmet are one piece.

Torso piece with silver Mandalorian armor plates is unique to Jango

Rocket power

Jango's silver jetpack also comes in the 2013 LEGO Star Wars Advent Calendar, but Santa Jango does not wear it. It gives a boost to a sleigh instead.

Lady locks

The first young Boba has long hair that is typically used on female minifigures. Obi-Wan Kenobi, Luke Skywalker, and Anakin Skywalker have also sported this hair, but Boba was the first LEGO Star Wars minifigure to wear it in black.

Boba's head is dual-sided. This side shows him grinning, but the other shows him looking sly.

Only one other minifigure has this hair piece in the LEGO Star Wars theme: Ezra Bridger.

Unique blue torso piece has printing to show wrinkled tunic, exposed skin at neck, and brown belt.

This uniform is worn by all young clones studying on Kamino.

Half-size legs in this medium blue color also appear on Max Rebo.

STAR VARIANT

This variant is exclusive to Sith Nightspeeder (set 7957). The printing on Asajj's sleeveless body suit armor continues on the back of her torso and matches her leg design.

From the Outer Rim

A Nightsister from the planet Dathomir, Ventress is not the only Dathomirian minifigure. The famous Sith Lord Darth Maul was a Dathomirian Nightbrother, taken away from his home planet at an early age by Darth Sidious.

Purple tattoo markings are continued on the back of the head

Asajj Ventress is a deadly assassin who works for the Sith Lord Count Dooku. Her fearsome minifigure has a unique head and torso, and wields twin red-bladed lightsabers. Asajj has dark side powers and a fiery temper—and she is on a mission to cause trouble in three Clone Wars sets.

Hondo Ohnaka

WEEQUAY PIRATE

Hondo Ohnaka is the fearsome leader of a gang of Weequay pirates. His minifigure wears mismatched clothes, a black bandana, and green-eyed goggles—items he has scavenged on his many journeys. Hondo only appears in one LEGO set, but he and his pilfering gang are always plotting new ways to make a quick buck.

Black bandana is also worn by the Weequay bounty hunter Shahan Alama (p.18)

Pirate Tank (set 7753)

Turk searches for Jedi minifigures to hold for ransom, but he's also out to double-cross his fellow pirates. Luckily for everyone, this rotten pirate only appears in one set.

Ready for anything!

The first Cad Bane minifigure wears breathing apparatus, just in case! Appearing in just two 2010 LEGO sets, he sports a tattered jacket and wields twin blasters.

Cad Bane is a bounty hunter like no other, so it is fitting that his minifigure is unique, too. Blue-skinned and red-eyed, he comes in two variants, both with the same distinctive and unique hat. The 2013 variant of this merciless mercenary zips about in a pirate speeder—but Obi-Wan is hot on his tail.

With his wide-brimmed hat, Cad thinks of himself as a space cowboy.

Prepared for any situation, Cad grips a blaster pistol.

STAR VARIANTS

Silver assassin

This metallic silver variant of IG-88 appears in Slave I (set 6209), released in 2006. He carries an older version of a LEGO Star Wars blaster.

White assassin

This white droid appears on the LEGO Death Star (set 10188). He is thought to be a variant of IG-88, but he is not named as him on the set box.

One of IG-88's hands is at a 90 degree angle to his opposite hand so he can hold his blaster vertically

Assassin droid IG-88 stalks the LEGO Star Wars galaxy in three sets, and in each one he has a slightly different look—though each is as intimidating as the last. The monstrous minifigure is obsessed with hunting and killing, and he comes well equipped to pursue his passion. His round, sensor-filled head can see in all directions at once!

IG-88's body is made up of identical pieces to the LEGO battle droid

IG-88 holds a weapon in each hand—this one is a medium blaster
